

Week of January 19

This week I have books about animals in the snow, a fun story with lots of movements to copy and a book where we push a button. There are new activities and links to enjoy too!

Enjoy!

Books for this week:

When It Starts To Snow by Phillis Gershator.

Where do the animals go when it starts to snow? What do you do when it starts to snow?

Enjoy!

Here are some suggested activities to do with your child this week.

Enjoy!

1. Salt Paint: Have your child squeeze white glue on paper. They can make random patterns or "draw" with the glue. Then have your child sprinkle salt over the glue. Your child can use water color paint to color over the salt. Let dry.
2. Shape hunt: Give your child a shape and see if he/she can find an item in the house that is that shape. For example, tv remote for rectangle or clock for circle. Talk about how many sides and corners are on the shapes.
3. Freeze dance/draw letters! Play music and have your child dance. Pause the music and your child can freeze. Then an adult can draw a letter and your child can try to draw the same letter. Play the music again and continue with different letters.
4. Spoon race: Put a cotton ball on a spoon and see if your child can walk around keeping the cotton ball on the spoon.
