

Week of November 2

It is November already! Here are books about farm animals and counting apples. There are also new activities to do at home.

Enjoy!

Books for this week:

The Little Yellow Leaf by Carin Berger

There is only one little yellow leaf left on the tree. I wonder when it will fall off the branch?

Here are some suggested activities to do with your child this week.

Enjoy!

1. Cut out shapes from paper or use foam shapes if you have them. Give your child the shapes, paper, glue, crayons and/or markers. Have your child make a picture using the shapes and glue them on paper. Let them use a crayon or marker to add more to the picture.
2. Play "What is Missing?" Put three items on a table. Have your child label the items a couple of times. Then cover up the items and take one away. Uncover the items and see if your child can figure out what is missing. You can move around the items, add a few more or put similar items together to make it more challenging.
3. Make a sensory bin. Put dried rice or dried beans in large container. Give your child a cup and spoon or put other small items such as beads or plastic letters in the rice or beans. Let your child play.
4. Clothespin Names: Write the letters of your child's name on clothespins. One letter on each clothespin. Then have your child put the clothespin on paper or other items to spell his or her name.
5. Count to 20 with movements. Have your child pick a movement to do such as jumping, clapping, tap knees, etc... Then do the movement as you count to 20 (if clapping, then clap each number as you count)
